Dr. Surajit Khanna's Post Incarceration Juvenile Justice Reformation Act Initiative provides young adults with a pathway to be reintegrated into society to pursue a new and productive life after being released from incarceration. They will lead a rewarding life as they remain off the streets and free from a life of crime. They will learn life skills, receive job training, gain employment, and pursue long-term education. We have introduced this initiative in Illinois, New York, Montana, New Jersey, Maine, California, and Pennsylvania. In addition, we are actively and strategically rolling out the initiative to all other states nationwide. It is being implemented through partnerships with community-based organizations, DA's offices, law enforcement, and the court systems. The initiative's planned expansion and rollout is to ALL 50 US States and 3,142 Counties. The first model program has been established in Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania.
